

Faser Iqbal

Paralegal
Group Litigation

London

Faser is a Paralegal in the Group Litigation department at Slater and Gordon Lawyers in London.

He works in the interest rate hedging products mis-selling team, which acts for small and medium sized enterprises who were mis-sold complex financial derivative products, seeking redress for clients from the UK's main banking institutions.

Many claims are advanced and facilitated through the FCA's Review Scheme although Faser also acts for a number of clients seeking recourse through different venues such as, the court and the Financial Ombudsman Service.

Before joining the team, Faser undertook work as a Paralegal within a busy Banking and Finance Litigation team of another law firm, whose main client was a leading financial institution. Through this, Faser gained in depth knowledge about interest rate derivative products as well as the FCA's review scheme. This role provided him with valuable experience in the area of financial services law and Faser in his current role is working alongside solicitors in the interest rate hedging products team.

As well as having a strong background in financial services law, Faser also has experience of working for the Citizens Advice Bureau, where he worked as a gateway assessor providing first hand advice and support to members of the community on various contentious matters ranging from criminal law, family law, employment law, immigration and housing.

In addition, Faser has participated in work experience placement with a previous law firm which has added to his experience of working on contentious matters although in the areas of family law and immigration.

Expertise

- Group litigation
- Mis-selling of interest rate derivatives

Career history

- Since 2013 Slater and Gordon
- London Southbank University
- College of Law, London

Professional memberships

- Member of The Law Society Junior Lawyers Division
- Member of the London Southbank University Alumni Association